Summer Institute
Lecture Series
Investigating Public
Opinion in Haiti:
Experiences from the Field

Monday, July 11, 2022

2:00-3:00 pm EDT

Online via Zoom

Dr. Roody Reserve will share his experiences from conducting survey research in Haiti. He will address the difficulties that an investigator encounters in the field in Haiti, but also the rewards from the subjects' extraordinary collaboration.

Dr. Roody Reserve holds a PhD in Political Science from the Pontificia Universidad Católica of Chile (2016). He teaches Political Science at the Universidad Centroamericana José Simeón Cañas, where he serves as the Director of the Master's Program in Political Science.

Dr. Reserve's research and teaching interests are in the field of comparative politics and survey research, political parties, and political violence. He has been involved with survey research in Haiti with LAPOP Lab since 2010 where he has collaborated as a trainer, fieldwork coordinator and translator of the questionnaires into Haitian Creole.

Presented in Haitian Creole.

By invitation only. For more information please email ldudley@fiu.edu.
