Ending 12 years of conservative National Party rule in Honduras, President Xiomara Castro and a coalition of political parties were sworn into office on January 27, 2022. The new government now faces a daunting task, how to solve the deeply rooted problems of corruption, violence, and poverty forcing many Hondurans to migrate to the United States in search of security and stability.

Join us as we discuss how the new Honduran government plans to solve these long-standing issues and how those solutions do, or do not, break with previous efforts to do the same.

This event will be in Spanish with English translation available.
