Tamara B. Rodriguez, EMCO, US and Caribbean

As an entrepreneur with more than 20 years of experience in accounting and finance, Tamara B. Rodriguez has worked in the public and private sectors and her clients range in various industries from technology to media. Tamara started her own practice when she realized that she needed the flexibility in her schedule to raise her two young girls while fulfilling her philanthropic duties, a passion in which her grandfather instilled. EMCO is an accounting and finance firm consulting clients on strategic planning, business valuation and continuation as well as providing financial and accounting services to businesses. Tamara has also impacted disproportionate communities through her charitable contributions, philanthropic outreach and advocating awareness.

As an author of two children's books which open the door for families to discuss difficult subjects, Tamara also shares her experiences and knowledge in her monthly blog, A Cup of T, offering quick tips for self-care and self-fulfillment, especially for on-the-go women. Tamara contributes her time focusing on areas including strengthening South Florida's Haitian community, breast cancer research, and creating diverse and inclusive initiatives in schools.

Tamara sits on the Board of Directors of Island TV, a U.S.-based television network with programming for the Afro-Caribbean community. Island TV streams on most major platforms and is broadcasted on cable in over 13 islands in the Caribbean.
